J. A. McLellan, M.A., LL.D., Principal of the School of Pedagogy, Hamilton: "I feel but little doubt that the STANDARD DICTIONARY will be preferred to all others by the teacher, the student, the business man and the man of letters."

DISTINGUISHING FEATURES.

I. It contains the most complete vocabulary of any dictionary ever published.

II. The Etymology is placed after the Definition.

III. In the Definition of Words the most common meaning is given first.

IV. The Scientific Alphabet is used in giving the Pronunciation of words.

V. The Quotations used to verify or illustrate the meanings of words are Located.

VI. Disputed Pronunciations and Spellings were referred, under the direction of Professor March, to a Committee of Fifty-Seven Philologists in American, English, Canadian, Australian, and East-Indian Universities, and representative professional writers and speakers in English.

VII. If a Word is Pronounced Variously, the first pronunciation given is the one preferred by this work, and this is followed by the pronunciations preferred by other dictionaries.

Prof. Wm. Clark, LL.D., D.C.L., F.R.S., Trinity College, Toronto: "As near perfection as we are likely to attain."

The Honourable Justin McCarthy, the Historian and Member of the House of Commons, London, Eng., recently wrote: "I refer to it (THE STANDARD DICTIONARY) every day—never once without feeling that it has given me a helping hand in my studies and in my writings. It is destined to be a conclusive authority to the English speaking peoples for many a generation.

VIII. It is the most complete and accurate book of Synonyms and Antonyms published.

IX. The Pictorial Illustrations are all (nearly 5,000) made expressly for this work; over 4,000 of these are in wood, and some are full-page groups in colors, made by the Messrs. Prang, and are true works of art.

X. For the first time in a dictionary a serious attempt has been made to reduce to a system the Compounding of Words.

XI. In its effort to help simplifying the Spelling of Words this Dictionary is conservative, and yet aggressively positive, along the lines of reform agreed upon almost unanimously by all the leading Philologists of England, Canada and America.

XII. Obsolete, Foreign, Dialetic, and Slang Words are given places only if likely to be sought for in a general English dictionary.

XIII. The Definitions in each department of science, and in various systems of philosophy, are provided with cross-references so arranged as to enable the Student to bring related parts of any science together in logical order, and giving a complete exposition of the entire subject.

XIV. A Pronouncing Dictionary in one Alphabetical arrangement of Biographical, Geographical and Historical names, Prenomens (including Christian, Greek and Roman names) Pseudonyms and Nicknames, names of characters celebrated in fiction, Mythology, etc., with explanatory Etymological, Definition and Statistical information, Compiled by Titus Mumson Coan, M.A., M.D.
